Waterproofing of Structures:

Waterproofing is a critical aspect of any construction, aimed at safeguarding concrete structures from the damaging effects of water ingress, so as to ensure durability and longevity of structures. This is achieved through two primary approaches: external applications and integral method. Regardless of the method employed, the selection of materials, system and workmanship must conform to best-practices, relevant codes and standards to ensure durability and effectiveness. The importance of waterproofing applies to various applications across Built Environment ranging from Buildings which include bathrooms, kitchens, balconies, decks, water tanks, swimming pools and to even green roofs to Infrastructure projects.

Selecting the right waterproofing system requires a comprehensive understanding of technologies available in the 'market' and their suitability to specific conditions. A well-designed and properly executed waterproofing solution not only protects the structural integrity of buildings but also contributes to long-term cost savings and sustainability and enhanced service life. Sustainability is an important element of the entire ecosystem.

In alignment with its mission to advance technical knowledge and professional excellence in the construction industry, the Indian Concrete Institute (ICI) – Bengaluru Centre is pleased to announce a one-day national seminar on “Waterproofing of Structures”, scheduled for Thursday, 19th June 2025. This seminar aims to bring together industry professionals, Engineers, Architects, industry experts, Researchers/Innovators and academicians to share insights, explore innovations, and discuss best practices in waterproofing technologies. This is a not-to-be-missed opportunity to get to know from Experts and share experiences. This is a good avenue for professional networking as well.
